Heavy duty is the word called: "mothering" it is foreign to feelings of othering always planning, fixing and covering like a blanket and too often smothering

Lightweight is the meaning of: "fathering" held up high, in his manhood not bothering with caresses and sweet talk but fostering making sure they are fiscally prospering

Quite uncanny, this word called: "sistering" like a rosebud in sunlight too blistering looked upon, million eyes that are glistening speaking truth but only through whispering

Domineering, this word named: "brothering" like an ominous presence it's hovering bringing order to chaos and suffering between soldiers in wartime it's buffering

We make plans 'gainst the world and it's sentiment but the labels enforced have turned sentient clinging to us and causes resentment our humanity housed within tenements
